LOGICLIBRARY'S BRENT CARLSON TO EXPLAIN THE IMPORTANCE OF SOA GOVERNANCE AT UPCOMING LEADING INDUSTRY CONFERENCES

Carlson, Recently Named One of the Industry's Top 25 CTOs, to Speak at IBM Rational Conference and Enterprise Architect Summit

PITTSBURGH—May 19, 2005—LogicLibrary®, the leading provider of software development asset management tools, today announced that Brent Carlson, vice president of technology and co-founder, will be a featured speaker next week at both the IBM Rational Software Development Conference and the Enterprise Architect Summit. Carlson, recently named as one of InfoWorld's "Top 25 CTOs" in business for his expertise and vision in software development, will be discussing service-oriented architecture (SOA) governance and its ability to increase business agility.

Carlson's presentation at the IBM Rational Conference will include a demonstration of LogicLibrary's Logidex, highlighting its unique ability to deliver an end-to-end SOA governance platform that spans the entire application development lifecycle.

What: Presentation: "SOA Governance - Principles & Tools to Support Rational and WebSphere Development/Deployment"
Event: IBM Rational Software Development Conference 2005
Who: Brent Carlson, vice president of technology and co-founder, LogicLibrary
When: Tuesday, May 24, 2005; 9:45 a.m. PDT
Where: Mandalay Bay Resort, Las Vegas

Carlson's Enterprise Architect Summit workshop will discuss best practices and supporting tools for SOA governance, ranging from architectural modeling to asset management and source code versioning, and will describe what is required to pull these disparate tools together into a cohesive strategy for SOA definition and delivery.

What: Presentation: "Principles and Tools for SOA Governance"
